ANNETTE'S BACK -AND THE DISNEY CHANNEL'S GOT HER!

In a dusty Dodge so black with a trailer on the back, Daddy brought us to the Promised Land." With those lines from "The Promised Land," a memory of her childhood which she has set to music and recorded for Starview Records, Annette Funicello commemorates her modest arrival in California from Utica, New York at the age of four. Eight years later she was the brightest star in Walt Disney's galaxy of "Mickey Mouse Club" Mouseketeers.

"To this day, after 30 years, wherever I go people ask, 'Where are your ears? How did you get to be a Mouseketeer? What was Walt Disney really like?' I tell them the ears are bronzed and placed under plexiglass on my living room coffee table. They're my pride and joy," Annette says.

"As to becoming a Mouseketeer, I was lucky to be in the right place at the right time. I was dancing in a school recital and Mr. Disney was in the audience. I didn't know he was out there.

No one knew he was out there. He just came in unannounced. He was scouting for Mouseketeer material. He saw me dance, and then he called my dancing teacher and said, 'We're holding interviews. Would you please bring her to the studio?' And that's how it came to be. They were looking for 24 boys and girls. I was the 24th.

"Of all the Mouseketeers, I was the only one who remained under contract to Mr. Disney for years and years and years. He was the dearest, kindest person and truly like a second father to me. He was a kid at heart. That's why he was able to make children so happy.

"I remember when I was a Mouseketeer I wanted to change my name to Annette Turner. Mr. Disney said, 'What did you say your last name was? Funicello? (My parents had Americanized it.) Young lady, you are mispronouncing your beautiful Italian name. It is Foon-ee-chellll-o. Once people learn how to pronounce it, they'll never forget it. No, you may not change your name."

By the time the "Mickey Mouse Club" disbanded in 1959, Annette was the teen-aged sensation of various other Disney TV productions, films and records. Her fan mail topped 6,000 letters a month. Three years later, his star having outgrown juvenile roles, Walt permitted Annette to appear in "Beach Party" for another studio.

"Before I went over there on loan out, Mr. Disney asked a favor of me. 'I know the girls in that picture will be wearing bikinis,' he said, 'but you have an image to uphold, and I'd appreciate it if you would wear a one-piece bathing suit.' Which I did, and in all seven of the Beach pictures that followed. People never put me down for that, yet I am often offered roles which would change that image. I won't take them. I'm happy with what I'm doing."

"In a dusty Dodge so black with a trailer on the back, Daddy brought us to the Promised Land."

This month, for her first Disney movie since "The Monkey's Uncle" in 1965, Annette lights up The Disney Channel screen in the world premiere of "Lots of Luck" (see page 8). She plays a suburban working mother who wins a million dollar lottery, and the comedy spins around the effect the money has on her family and friends. Except for the prize and its consequences, the role almost mirrors Annette's present style of life.

"I have three children," she says. "Gina's 19 and in her second year of college, Jackie's 15, Jason is 10. I thought when they were babies, that would be the most time-consuming part. But now, since I can't just rock them in my arms and put them down to sleep anymore, they want my attention. I still do homework with the boys. Gina will come in from a date and sit on my bed and talk. We've lived in the same house for 19 years.

"I'm in a car pool. I drive the boys to school every morning, and pick up a lot of kids besides. I am an office worker at Jason's school every Monday. I sell hot lunches in the cafeteria twice a month.

"During the summer we've got Little League, and that takes up all my time. I work in the snack bar, making pizzas. As soon as my boys get home from school, they have to get down there and start warming up, and then I start selling behind the window.

"In the evening, if I know I have a lot of time I'll make an elaborate dinner. Then we'll go to visit Gina, who works after school in a dress shop.

"I choose not to act on a steady basis. I've been making peanut butter commercials for seven years, and they've just picked up my contract for another year. It's a minimal amount of work and keeps your face on the screen. It's an actress's dream come true."

But die-hard fans have long implored her to reteam with Frankie Avalon for a Beach movie update, Annette says. "We have our built-in audience out there. The people who saw the old pictures are now our ages. Then we have new kids who want to see us together again because they watch those reruns on television." After discussing the possibility, Annette and Frankie are embarking on "Beach Party '86," a movie which finds them married and sharing domestic problems with a 19-year-old daughter.

While Annette still fiercely protects her clean professional image, explaining that "whatever I do today, I want my children to be proud of me," she is able to smile at her enduring fame as a Mouseketeer and beach bunny. She will occasionally put on the ears for a special appearance, as she did recently for a spoof of the Beach pictures at a theatrical revue in San Francisco.

"They had the stage decorated with hot dog stands, beach umbrellas and 11 tons of sand," she says. "I led the audience in the Mickey Mouse Club theme song and sang 'Pineapple Princess.' For the first time in my life, I got a standing ovation."

The Disney Channel. For The Family. All Of It.

Sometimes The Disney Channel surprises people. Take Mrs. John Edwards of Kansas City as an example.

"We got The Disney Channel for our children," says Mrs. Edwards, "but my husband and I end up watching in the evenings after the kids have gone to bed."

She's not alone. Each week we hear from subscribers who thought they were buying something for their children or grandchildren, yet found themselves watching more and more during "grown-up time."

It reminds us of the early days at Disneyland. Families flocked to the theme park "for the kids." (The name "Disney" had made such an impact on children that the public equated "Disney" with "kids.") And—surprise, surprise—the parents wound up having the time of their lives. Today, three out of every four visitors to Disneyland are over 18 years old.

John D. Dickmeyer, a 65-year-old from Ft. Wayne, Indiana, writes us: "I'm either in my first childhood or I never noticed my transition to a second childhood. Being elderly has its benefits, and The Disney Channel is one of mine." Mrs. Chester Bowlin Jr., 51, of Beaumont, Texas says, "I'm in love with The Disney Channel. I know my stress factor must go down by 100 percent when I watch it. (There are no children in our household. I got the Channel for myself.)" A letter from Helen Wilke ends, "Please don't change a thing about the Channel, and know that we are watching here in Minneapolis—and we don't even have kids!"

What programming appeals most to our adult viewers? For openers, our exclusive made-for-The Disney Channel movies. Carol Wilson of Iola, Kansas was one of over 300 subscribers who wrote to us about "Love Leads the Way." "You outdid yourselves," she notes. "It was great—excellent acting, scenery, story. I saw it at least five times."

Our series have also built a large following. Jack Williamson of New Braunfels, Texas casts his vote for "Disney Family Album," saying that "it's great to know more about the creative giants behind the scenes at Disney. I'd like to give you another gold star." Music and comedy series deliver high satisfaction scores for our adult viewers, too. "Steve Allen's Comedy Room" and "Big Bands at Disneyland" are particular favorites. As Bruce Armstrong of Las Vegas, Nevada points out, "Now those of us who are over 35 have something to look forward to."

Alaskan wolf eyes a human intruder with curiosity in "Never Cry Wolf"

Month in, month out, "Five Mile Creek," our dramatic series set in the Australian frontier of the 1860s, wins bravos from parents. "We're very excited about events in the 'Five Mile Creek' family, and there is a good deal of speculation among our family members about what will happen to them next," writes Candyce D. Ewald of Gladstone, Oregon. "We like the show very much. When our Disney Channel Magazine comes each month, that's usually the first program description we read!" Mrs. Robert Siegel of Grand Rapids, Michigan adds: "I'm a 58-year-old who's a real Disney fan. My favorite program is 'Five Mile Creek.' The people in it are just great, and I look forward to each episode."

Obviously folks are liking what they see. And they want more. Well, in the next few months, more is what we'll be bringing you.

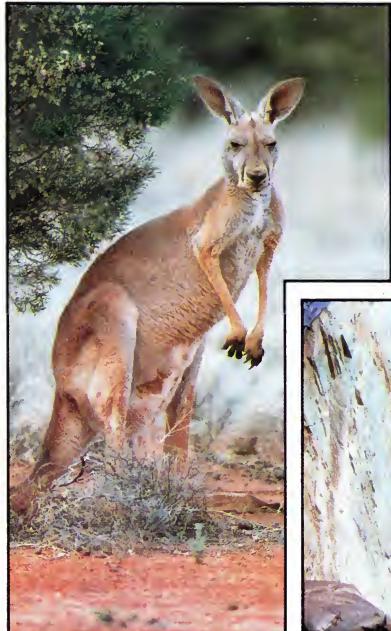

For starters, in March you'll receive "Splash"—one of the top 10 box office hits of 1984.

In April, the critically-acclaimed "Never Cry Wolf" will make its exclusive world television premiere on the Channel.

And, since our Disney Channel grown-ups are also big fans of animation ("Mousertpiece Theater" is a popular, hardy perennial), we'll present the world TV premiere this summer of two full length Disney animated classics, "Robin Hood" and "The Sword in the Stone."

Peggy Christianson, our vice president of program development, sums it up when she says, "This is an exhilarating time for us. Our commitment to produce quality programming for all ages has never been stronger. It is so gratifying to hear from subscribers who care as much as we do. We believe The Disney Channel is for the family. All of it."

Wilderness Bound Cameramen Share Secrets Of Success

Your response to "Wilderness Bound" from Survival Anglia, our new natural history series, is astonishing! Although the first program appeared only last month, we are already overwhelmed with your enthusiastic letters. So, since this award-winning series is a hit, we thought you'd enjoy knowing something about how it is filmed.

Dieter Plage, a "Wilderness Bound" photographer who shot "We Live With Elephants" (see page 12), is famous for his ability to film dangerous animals in hostile environments. As he points out, a successful naturalist photographer doesn't just rush into the jungle. He must spend many hours in careful preparation.

"You have to understand the chance you're taking and think the thing through, going over every tiny detail," Plage says. "You do not, for instance, set up a camera and wait for everything to happen in front of you within 20 minutes. You can ask an actor to pose by a tree where the light and background are perfect. Try asking an elephant."

Despite their thorough preparation, our "Wilderness Bound" cinematographers are ever aware that their wild subjects are unpredictable and dangerous. Survival often depends on luck as much as skill. Dieter Plage recalls being charged — and knocked down — by an immense bull elephant. "How I managed to miss all four feet and get up with nothing more than a few scratches remains a mystery," he says. Fellow photographers like David DeVries, Jeff Foott and Alan Root recount equally lucky escapes from leopards, crocodiles and gorillas.

A single program typically takes six months to two years to film. Simply figuring out the best way to photograph the show's subject can be time consuming. Alan Root, who shot last month's "Balloon Safari," used private planes, helicopters, and a hot air balloon to get his superb footage of different animals. He built a 50-foot tower to photograph nesting birds atop giant African baobab trees. And when filming a herd of migrating gnus, he mingled with the hungry lions that were also trying to sneak up quietly on their prey.

Other cameramen have submerged themselves in shark-infested waters, perched for hours on mountain ledges, and endured primitive conditions on a subantarctic island to get their rare footage. The problems and perils of these daredevil filmmakers is the "story behind the story" of our many "Wilderness Bound" features. ♦

"My parents gave me a gift that changed my life! When I was 3½ years old they presented me with my baby sister, Valerie Valentine. Because of our surname and the fact that she was born on Valentine's Day, she and my mother were on the frontpage of several newspapers across the country."

What was the Valentine's Day gift

This question piqued
so we asked our "Feb. celebs" to

"When I was a Mouseketeer I got lots of valentines from fans, but the most surprising was an engagement ring from a boy who wrote that he was madly in love with me and when we both grew up (I was 12), he wanted to marry me. Well, it was an expensive ring, so I sent it back. That evidently broke his heart because his mother returned the ring with a letter, saying, 'My son has saved and saved for this ring. Please don't send it back again.' So I kept it as a charming Valentine's Day remembrance, and as the years went on I did get married—but not to the boy who gave me that ring."

*—Annette Funicello
LOTS OF LUCK*

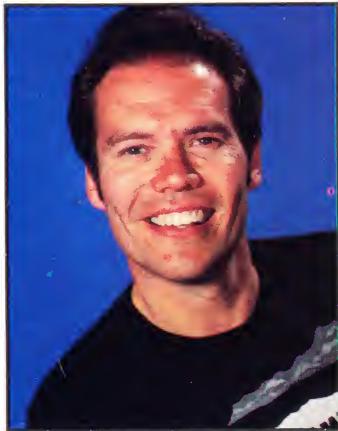

"I once received a very romantic dinner invitation that I couldn't resist. It was anonymous, but it was so charming I just knew this person must know me very well. I showed up at the designated rendezvous and to my complete surprise, I'd never seen the guy before in my life."

that was fine when he was touring, but he extended the invitation when he played in Long Beach a week before our wedding! Along with our 1,250 invited guests, we had hundreds of screaming fans and security guards! It was a Valentine's Day we'll never forget!"

Annette Funicello, Polly Holliday and Martin Mull enjoy a winning streak in a new made-for-The Disney Channel film

LOT OF LUCK

Martin Mull, Annette Funicello, Fred Willard, Polly Holliday

From the day we premiered the original Mickey Mouse Club on the Channel in 1983, you've showered us with requests to see Annette Funicello in a contemporary movie. So the moment we decided to film "Lots of Luck" we also decided to invite Annette to star in it. The happy result is this family comedy, in which Annette returns for her first Disney picture since "The Monkey's Uncle" 20 years ago.

EXCLUSIVE

Like anyone stretching to make ends meet, auto mechanic Frank Maris (Martin Mull) and his wife Julie (Annette Funicello) dream about what they'd do with a million dollars. Their kids need braces, the car's getting old, the dryer needs repairing... Then Julie actually comes up with a winning lottery ticket!

That's just the beginning. It looks like their lucky streak is a mile wide as everyone in the family starts bringing home prizes.

Can a couple of ordinary parents keep their feet on the ground under such circumstances? Have the Marises inherited the Midas touch, including the problems that go with it? You'll be delighted and surprised by the outcome of this million dollars worth of 24-karat entertainment.

From Disney, With Love

Love's magic spell is everywhere in this 90-minute animated celebration of romance.

Music, songs and enchanting moments from Disney classics go all the way back to when knighthood was in flower. Twosomes who have been pixilated, twitterpated, fascinated and infatuated are shown at the time they were struck by Cupid's arrow.

Mickey and Minnie's hearts entwine at a vaudeville show, where Gay Nineties songs set a sentimental mood. Donald dreams of marriage to Daisy Duck. Pluto falls for Dinah, a cute dachshund.

Lady and Tramp share a candlelight dinner while their waiter serenades them with "Bella Notte." Prince Phillip and Princess Aurora waltz to "Once Upon a Dream" from "Sleeping Beauty."

Many other animated stars are entranced by romance in this delightful musical valentine presented exclusively on The Disney Channel. February 1, 3, 5, 8, 11, 14, 18, 20, 24, 26

Tramp and his Lady share a romantic interlude (above), while Briar Rose, who will become the lovely Princess Aurora, dances with forest friends to music from Tchaikovsky's "Sleeping Beauty."

HAVE SOME HEAVENLY FUN WITH A DOWN-TO-EARTH COMEDY!

NORTH AVENUE IRREGULARS

Edward Herrmann, Barbara Harris, Susan Clark, Karen Valentine, Michael Constantine, Cloris Leachman

Something's rotten in the city of New Compton! The town is riddled with organized crime. When the Rev. Mike Hill (Edward Herrmann), new minister of North Avenue Presbyterian Church, declares war on local bookies and their bosses, he gets more than he'd bargained for.

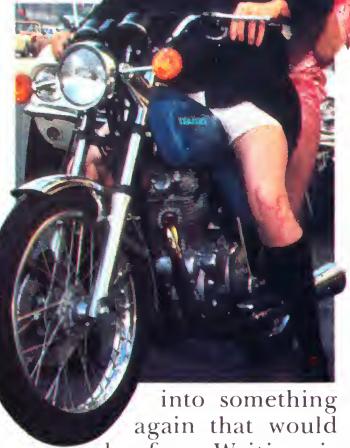

Backed by two Treasury Department undercover agents, he turns the church Ladies' Auxiliary into a citizens' surveillance team, and a more unlikely group of spies can hardly be imagined!

This movie is based on the Rev. Albert Fay Hill's book describing the exploits of his real-life "North Avenue Irregulars," whom he recruited in the early 1960s. The handful of them that still live in New Rochelle, N.Y., where their adventure took place, prefer to remain anonymous. Theirs was a risky mission which has not been entirely forgotten.

The North Avenue Presbyterian Church lost its identity when it was merged with another church in the 1970s. Mr. Hill moved to Denver in 1968, and left the ministry 11 years ago to become a full-time writer. He is ever ready to crusade against crime.

"I've proposed a TV campaign to reduce crime in our area," he says. "We'd ask for volunteers, we'd monitor the courts, monitor the police, photograph illegal things that are going on like drug dealing and prostitution. I'd like to get into something again that would be fun. Writing is wonderful, but it's also a little tame."

Henry Bergman

Our encore presentation of Chaplin classics begins with two of his best, "The Gold Rush" (1925) and "Pay Day" (1922).

In the first, a full-length comedy, Charlie's prospecting for Klondike gold in 1898. He's thrown in with Big Jim McKay (Mack Swain), another prospector. Snowbound and starving, Charlie eats his boot while Jim, delirious with hunger, imagines Charlie is a chicken and tries to devour him. Storm over, they depart as friends. That fanciful sequence sets the pace for Chaplin's fable of luckless love and a lucky strike which ends, after boisterous misadventures, happily.

Charlie plays a laborer in "Pay Day," a two-reeler. When he holds out a few bucks from his wife for a night on the town, pandemonium follows. February 4, 7, 9, 13, 15, 17, 21, 24, 27

VISIT WITH WILD ELEPHANTS!

WILDERNESS BOUND ...from Survival Anglia

This month, our new award-winning nature series takes you to the Douglas-Hamilton family homestead. Just watch out for the neighbors — a herd of wild elephants!

"We Live with Elephants," narrated by David Niven, focuses on the work and unique lifestyle of Scottish scientist Dr. Iain Douglas-Hamilton. To learn how a natural balance between elephants and their habitat can be maintained, Iain and his family lived among the 500 elephants in Lake Manyara National Park, Tanzania for five years.

This tour through Douglas-Hamilton's "neighborhood" gives you an intimate look at the personalities and idiosyncrasies of these giant tuskers. At times, they lose their tempers. You'll see one member of a tough juvenile "gang" charge Iain's four-wheel-drive vehicle at 25 miles an hour. Later, a huge matriarch tries to stop Iain from injecting a bull elephant with a tranquilizer. She smashes through the hood and squashes the steering wheel of his vehicle.

Despite these incidents, the humans and elephants usually coexist in amazing harmony. As Iain walks fearlessly amidst 10-foot-high giants, his friends greet him with the traditional trunk to trunk touch. (Iain substitutes a hand.) Saba and Dudu, the Douglas-Hamiltons' baby daughters, fearlessly play in the river bed while elephants drink close by. And in one touching scene, a one-tusked cow elephant shyly brings out two new calves for her naturalist friend to meet.

Iain's research has uncovered important facts about elephants which will help solve their over-population problem. But it is his close personal relationship with the great beasts which makes this fascinating film so special.

Chicago on the Good Foot

Disney Studio Showcase Presents Jazz From The Windy City

It's South Side, North Side and all around the town in "Chicago on the Good Foot." Beginning with the migration of blacks from New Orleans during the 1920s, this hour-long special traces the rich musical heritage of the Windy City from early gospel through contemporary blues and jazz.

The music never stops while our cameras record performances by the Victory Travelers, the Art Ensemble of Chicago, singer Junior Wells and jazz clarinetist Jimmy Ellis.

Centerpiece of this salute to a uniquely American art form is a concert at Chicago's Park West Club emceed by Purvis Spann "the Blues Man," featuring James Cotton on harmonica, songstress Koko Taylor, the Legendary Blues

A DIFFERENT SHOW EACH WEEK

Pop some popcorn, pull up the extra pillows and chairs, then call all your friends and loved ones together! No one will want to miss this Sunday evening treat—the premiere of a new show in our outstanding series. (Each show repeats during the week.) Walt's your host for two of the special programs airing this month.

In "Three On the Run," beginning February 3, the Tanner brothers (Brett McGuire, Don Williams) plan to win the Annual Sled Dog Race even though they're accident-prone amateurs with three slowpoke pooches. The boys look like a shoo-in for last place until an unscheduled entrant changes all the odds.

Who is "The Mad Hermit of Chimney Butte"? It's your old friend Donald Duck! Walt presents the saga of this beleaguered bird, who is driven from the city by obnoxious neighbors starting February 10. All Donald wants is a quiet life in his country cottage. Instead, he's plagued by bees, bears, and even ghosts!

In "The City Fox," airing February 17, a red fox from the rugged Sacramento Delta hops a rowboat to San Francisco. This foxy tourist inspects the zoo and tussles with local "wildlife" before he's targeted for deportation.

"Man in Flight" on February 24 explores our endless efforts to leave the ground. After Walt's introduction, you'll see cartoons, photos, and historical footage that take you from the earliest firecrackers to modern rockets which have opened the infinite reaches of space.

Country fox finds excitement when he visits the big city

Lorenzo Lamas and Edward Herrmann aid a wrestler

TAKE DOWN

Edward Herrmann, Lorenzo Lamas, Kathleen Lloyd

Join the seniors of Mingo Junction High School as they grapple with a problem. They've been defeated by rival Rockville in every sport so far. For their last chance, they've chosen wrestling to challenge Rockville and gain some glory. But few of them have ever wrestled.

Their coach is no help. He's an English teacher without any athletic experience. It's up to Nick (Lorenzo Lamas), a handsome, athletic senior, to save the day. Nick, however, has troubles of his own. The plot takes more twists than a crossbody ride hold before the final match.

THAT NIGHT IN RIO

Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Carmen Miranda

It's a comedy of errors as suave Don Ameche appears in the dual role of night club entertainer and wealthy aristocrat. The aristocrat's wife (Alice Faye) asks the entertainer to impersonate her out-of-town husband. The impersonator falls in love with the wife, then must face her angry husband and his own flamboyantly jealous girl friend (Carmen Miranda).

Alice Faye rivaled Betty Grable as the queen of 20th Century-Fox musicals during World War II. Eventually Grable outranked her, but not before Faye brightened some 30 song-spangled films.

WHERE FUNNY PEOPLE GATHER JUST FOR LAUGHS

Bob Newhart, Danny Thomas, Jan Murray and Franklyn Ajaye keep the jokes coming as they swap yarns with Steve Allen and his British sidekick, Joe Baker. The Terry Gibbs Sextet supplies musical accents.

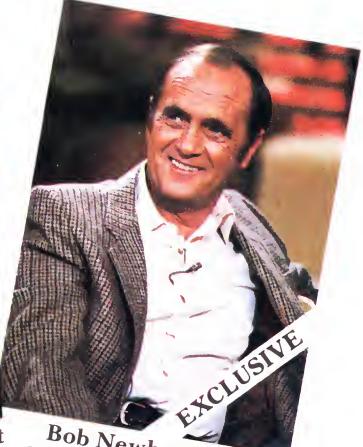

Allen is at home with his star comedians. He spotted Newhart back in the 1950s, when the creator of "The Button-down Mind of Bob

Jan Murray vies for laughs with a joke about an icebox

Danny Thomas jokes about how he became a comedian

Bob Newhart says being funny's no joke

Newhart" was getting started. He's known Thomas from the days when Danny, who used to perform on the kazoo, was called The Tinhorn Cavalier. And he introduces Murray as an old and dear friend — "older than dearer." Ajaye, a young and relative newcomer, is a recent addition to Allen's circle of comics.

After a vintage video clip of Bob Newhart doing a telephone routine, the boys talk about different styles of comedy and when they first discovered that they were funny. They muse about the times they flopped in front of audiences — and about the more predictable times when they wowed 'em.

SMITH!

Glenn Ford, Nancy Olson, Dean Jagger, Keenan Wynn, Warren Oates

This unusual, modern-day Western sheds a different light on the age-old conflict between whites and Indians.

Ignoring the townspeople's hostility towards their Indian neighbors, the rancher known only as Smith (Glenn Ford) befriends them. He even becomes the blood brother of a tribal elder, Ol' Antoine (Chief Dan George).

When Ol' Antoine's friend, Gabriel Jimmyboy (Frank Ramirez), is falsely accused of murder, Smith advises the young Indian to turn himself in. Jimmyboy reluctantly agrees after Vince (Keenan Wynn), the racist deputy sheriff, begins using hunting dogs to track him down.

At the trial, Ol' Antoine is the only witness for the defense. Unless his words can change the crowd's anger to

MIRACLE of the WHITE STALLIONS

Robert Taylor, Lilli Palmer, Curt Jurgens

Here's a movie for all of you who love the world of horses and horsemanship.

"Miracle of the White Stallions" is a true story about the rescue of Vienna's famous Lipizzan horses during World War II. Robert Taylor plays Col. Alois Podhajsky, the riding master who engineered the daring feat. Lilli Palmer portrays his wife.

You'll see the breathless performances of the fabulous

Lipizzaner in demonstrations of classic "dressage." These are traditionally presented at the Spanish Riding School in Vienna, where scenes were filmed under Col. Podhajsky's expert supervision. You'll also see the spectacular "Operation Cowboy" by General George S. Patton's army which was designed to bring the stallions to safety.

EIGHT ACADEMY AWARDS! The Best Years of our Lives

Myrna Loy, Fredric March, Dana Andrews, Teresa Wright, Hoagy Carmichael, Virginia Mayo, Harold Russell

Of all the motion pictures ever made, few have touched the heart of America so deeply or drawn such a shower of honors as this multiple Academy Award winner.

Told in personal, simple, yet bitter and sweetly romantic terms, it is the story of three returning veterans of World War II and their attempt to pick up the threads of their lives.

Dana Andrews portrays a young pilot whose wife, Virginia Mayo, has found other men more satisfying and has no liking for marriage. Teresa Wright plays the daughter of Fredric March and Myrna Loy who falls in love with a married man. Harold Russell, a handless Navy veteran, returns to his high school sweetheart and finds new friends.

This acknowledged masterpiece endures as an unforgettable film that is both beautiful and terrifying, yet is also an honest depiction of human beings at their worst and their best.

MEET DISNEY'S
DECEPTION

Peter and Harrison Ellenshaw

What you see isn't necessarily what you see, as two magicians named Peter and Harrison Ellenshaw show you this month.

Father and son, the Ellenshaws are special effects artists who can create anything imaginable—and sometimes unimaginable—with a brush stroke. Peter Ellenshaw began his Disney career some 35 years ago by painting mattes for "Treasure Island," "The Story of Robin Hood and His Merrie Men" and other live-action pictures filmed in England. As he explains, a matte is part of the process which gives a photographically incomplete scene the appearance of total reality. Academy Award winner Ellenshaw carried this technique further, and he reveals some tricks he perfected for pictures like "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," "Swiss Family Robinson," "Mary Poppins" and "The Black Hole."

Harrison Ellenshaw has contributed not only to Disney movies but to such blockbusters as George Lucas's "Star Wars" and "The Empire Strikes Back." An innovator like his father, he helped create the awesome electronic world in "Tron" which was produced in part by computer programming.

As their accomplishments prove, making illusions look real is the Ellenshaw formula for entertainment.

So Dear To My Heart

*Burl Ives, Beulah Bondi,
Harry Carey, Luana Patten,
Bobby Driscoll*

"So Dear to My Heart" sweeps into the winner's circle this month, eclipsing two other outdoor dramas, "The Wild Country" and "Mosby's Marauders."

Turn back the calendar to the early 1900s for this fondly-told story in live-action and animation of an Indiana farm boy (Bobby Driscoll), his beloved black lamb, and the dreams, disappointments and joys of childhood.

Balladeer Burl Ives has fun with "Lavender Blue," "Billy Boy" and "Sourwood Mountain" from his bag of American folk songs.

Jack Taylor and Con Madigan on the road to new homestead

Welcome To Pooh Corner

There's never a jarring note in the Hundred Acre Wood where Winnie the Pooh, Eeyore and Piglet play in perfect harmony with their other life-sized puppetronic friends.

A simple melody starts the whole woods singing in "Song of Eeyore." After Eeyore shares a favorite tune, his chums add their own special touch. In this episode's

Pooh celebrates the end of winter with a song and a dance

FIVE MILERS FIGHT FOR NEW HOME

FIVE MILE CREEK

Louise Caire Clark, Rod Mullinar, Liz Burch, Michael Caton, Peter Carroll, Martin Lewis, Gus Mercurio, Nicole Kidman with Jay Kerr as Con Madigan

After their grueling trek over the Great Divide, the Five Mile Creek family finds an unwelcoming committee awaiting them in Emu Plains. In "The Gauntlet," beginning February 6, the townspeople won't talk to them, the powerful Armstrongs want to run them out of town, and the owner of the homestead they hope to buy greets them with rifle shots!

With only one reluctant ally, a ragged shepherdess named

Annie (Nicole Kidman), the Five Milers must make their stand in Emu Plains—regardless of the consequences!

Seventeen-year-old Nicole Kidman, a high-energy Aussie actress who has won major roles in Australian feature films and movies, debuts in this episode.

Champion skiers streak down the slopes at Nordic Valley

Ski ala Carte

Enjoy the beauty, fun and skill of every imaginable kind of skiing at resorts from California to Greece in this 90-minute action feature.

Producer Warren Miller adds wryly humorous narration to footage shot at the world's best and worst ski runs. There's novelty skiing, deep powder delights, and some not-so-graceful chair lift dismounts. Seeing is believing when 403-pound John Trudgen barrels down the slopes.

Acrobatics highlight the world's freestyle championships at Nordic Valley, Utah. The Kirkwood Enduro Race tests participants with six hours of non-stop skiing at Lake Tahoe, California. Then it's off to Chamonix, France to schuss down glacial peaks over snow 600 feet deep.

From the Handicapped Nationals to ski jumpers stretching for an unprecedented 500-foot leap, witty Warren has something on his menu for every taste.

Donald in Mathmagic Land

Join Donald Duck on a mystical journey to Mathmagic Land, where trees have square roots and birds chirp the equation pi from the treetops. Along the way you'll learn how mathematical principles underlie music, art, science, sports—and even nature herself.

Seen from Donald's viewpoint, the ogre of figures and problems and precise calculations first encountered in elementary arithmetic turns out to be much less fearsome than reputed. "It's in everything around us all the time," Donald observes.

This award-winning animated educational featurette follows "The North Avenue Irregulars" (see page 10).

It figures that ciphers would stop Donald in Mathmagic Land, where numbers really count

Cinderella: A Lesson in Compromise

Gus, the manly mouse of Walt Disney's animated feature, "Cinderella," gets greedy for more than his share of breakfast and almost ends up as a meal for Lucifer the cat. This short subject, which points up the maxim that trying to get more than you need or deserve only leads to trouble, follows "Take Down" (see page 13).

A Day in Nature's Community

Mountain animals of the Sierra Nevada are the heroes of this short film about ecology and survival, which follows "Child of Glass" (see page 12).

Linda Palmer
Subscriber Services Director

Dear Friends,

Want to know a secret? I frequently watch The Disney Channel all by myself after the kids are asleep, and I love it!

When "The Happiest Millionaire" was on several months ago, I saw it so often I memorized most of the songs. (Maybe I'm just a Disney fanatic, but I truly enjoy lighthearted, tasteful movies.)

That's why I'm looking forward to "The North Avenue Irregulars" this month. It's a real "knee-whacker" and a personal favorite of mine. I recommend it.

A lot of you have written to say that you'd like to see more programs and movies of interest to adults. We've been scouting for and creating shows to fulfill those requests. New made-for-the-Channel movies like "Breakin' Through" and "The Undergrads," and series such as "Dr. Joyce Brothers" are in production right now. We'll keep you posted on more of our exciting plans for "grown-up time" viewing as they develop.

Sincerely,

A WARM RESPONSE TO "LOVE LEADS THE WAY"

My family and I have just finished watching "Love Leads the Way." It was fantastic! There wasn't a dry eye in the house. It really made me feel as if I were part of Morris Frank and Buddy's life!

Christine L. Cremer
Secor, IL

I have never been so touched by a movie as I was by "Love Leads the Way." The Disney Channel must be commended on presenting such a fine program. This movie is a crowning triumph to your already superb Channel.

CRAVINGS FOR ANIMATED CLASSICS

Outstanding!! That's the word for The Disney Channel. Our whole family enjoys the programs—from the cartoons to the full-length movies.

I realize it may be difficult, but we would all like to see you run one of your super animated movies. What a shot in the arm for the Channel!

Warren Keating
Great Bend, KS

In response to the many subscriber requests we've received, we'll be bringing you some of Disney's most beloved animated classics, starting with "Robin Hood" and "The Sword in the Stone."

ZORRO FAN WANTS MORE "Z"

I am writing to see if you will be bringing "Zorro" back soon. This program has been my favorite ever since it was originally on the air in 1957. I did catch every episode last year on The Disney Channel, but would so much like to have it on again.

Kathy Gregory
Los Angeles, CA

The "Zorro" series is scheduled to return to the Channel in spring.

POOH'S CORNER OF CANADA

At work we are using maps of parts of Canada. I was surprised to see that several lakes were named Christopher Robin, Piglet, Kanga, Roo, Tigger, Pooh, and Rabbit! What fun—but my co-workers are getting tired of me humming the "Welcome to Pooh Corner" theme song!

SELF-ESTEEM THE GIFT OF A LIFETIME

"If there's one thing I'm really good at, it's losing," Oliver Cleaver says in the "Paper Tiger" episode of "Still the Beaver" (see page 16).

What parent hasn't heard such familiar laments after a lost ball game, quarrel with a pal or so-so report card? Occasional periods of self-doubt go with the territory of growing up. But there's plenty you can do to help self-esteem flourish in your child.

Accepting Your Child's Stages

By keeping your expectations in line with your children's ages and temperaments, you'll provide a supportive atmosphere that will encourage self-esteem.

A child's confidence in his inherent value and ability to handle situations is "the foundation of a healthy personality, influencing a person's success in relationships, work, play and overall enjoyment of life," says Dr. Robert Moradi, Director of Family and Child Psychiatric Training at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles.

That confidence is developed as children go through the normal stages of growth. A one-year-old's attempts to walk and talk, a two-year-old's frequent assertions of independence, even a pre-teen's need for solitude can signal a healthy ego.

"If you understand that an action is fairly typical for a particular age you're less likely to judge it harshly, more likely to accept it—and the child—with humor and empathy, even if discipline is still required. That acceptance is crucial to a child's self-perception," Dr. Moradi says.

Listening Responsively

Of all the things you can do to nurture self-esteem, listening may be the most important—and the most challenging!

Although not every child is as eloquent as Oliver, "children who can talk about feelings at least have the confidence and courage to express themselves," says Dr. Moradi. "When children lose faith in themselves, they stop talking because they do not believe that anyone will listen."

Oliver Cleaver and his dad, the Beaver, share a warmhearted talk about self-esteem

Careful listening expresses your belief in your child's importance more loudly than words. Love comes through loud and clear when you:

- Are sensitive to verbal and non-verbal messages and communicate your understanding with empathy.
- Avoid the temptation to talk too much, lecture, rationalize, deny, judge, or feign sympathy.
- Remain comfortable with expressions of emotion.
- Stay focused on the moment.
- Admit mistakes and share conflicting feelings honestly.

A Checklist of Esteem-Builders

Positive messages don't need to be verbal. Spending one-on-one time is a significant way to say "you matter," even though you and your child may just be taking a walk to the corner store.

Counselors and educators put the following ideas high on their list of esteem-builders:

- Teach your child that doing one's best is the real definition of success.
- Provide several solutions to problems and allow your child to make a choice.
- Assign appropriate chores for age and skill levels and avoid the tendency to overdirect.

- Break challenges into small, accomplishable steps.
- Praise specific actions rather than general goodness.
- Show your spontaneous affection often.
- Define and reinforce limits.
- Discuss daily events.
- Use agreed-upon rewards and written contracts to modify behavior.
- Encourage your child to enjoy constructive experiences—hobbies, sports, scouting, music.
- Respect and encourage childish curiosity and find acceptable outlets for your child's eagerness to know.

Communicating the Wonderfulness of You

Children's remarkable resilience and lack of rigid defense layers make it relatively easy for them to change or improve poor self-esteem with your help. Whatever steps you may decide to take, the underlying key to success isn't really all that mysterious. It's giving your child what any human being needs: time, responsive listening, and clear communication of love. These things say "I love you because you're you."

Did you know?

- There are two kinds of elephants: Asian and African. African elephants are larger than Asian, have bigger ears and are not as easily domesticated. Asian elephants have two bumps on their foreheads and an arched back. Their skin is generally smoother than that of their African relatives.

- The average life span of an elephant is 50 to 60 years.

- An elephant's trunk has 40,000 muscles in it. It is used as a hand and a very sensitive nose. With it, an elephant can smell water up to three miles away!

• A newborn elephant is called a calf. It is very hairy, usually weighs between 180 and 250 pounds and is about three feet tall at the shoulder.

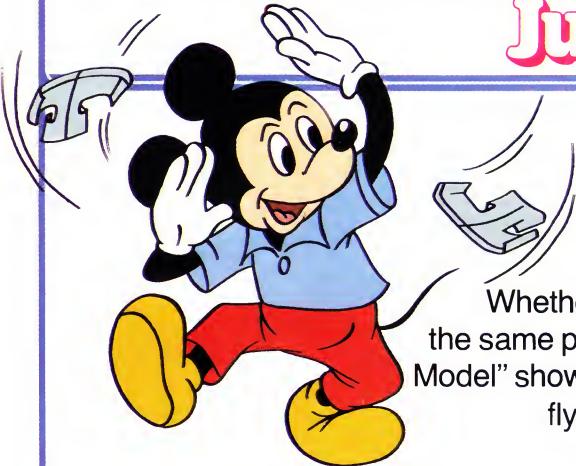

- Mothers may protect their calves for as long as 10 years, but can have other calves about every four years.

• Tusks are actually front teeth. The largest on record belonged to an African male. They were 11 feet long and weighed 293 pounds.

• Elephants spend up to 16 hours a day eating. A large bull can eat from 300-600 pounds of vegetation and drink 30-40 gallons of water daily.

Fly High with a Paper Plane

Whether made of paper or steel, airplanes and gliders are affected by the same principles of aerodynamics such as lift and drag. "The Barnaby Model" shown here is an especially good flyer. All you need for hours of high-flying fun with it is a piece of 8½" x 11" bond typing paper!

1. Fold the paper in half widthwise and lay it with the crease down on a hard surface. Measure 4½" up from one long edge. Measure ¼" up from the other long edge.

2. Fold the ¼" strip up. Flatten. Continue folding until you reach the 4½" mark. Flatten.

3. Refold along the center line. Cut as shown in the diagram.
Open paper and turn up a quarter inch on each wing tip. Fold the tail tips down along the angle shown to make rudders.

A diagram showing a rectangular sheet of paper. A vertical dashed line through the center represents the fold. An arrow points to the right edge with the text "FOLD". Another arrow points to the right edge with the text "CUT".

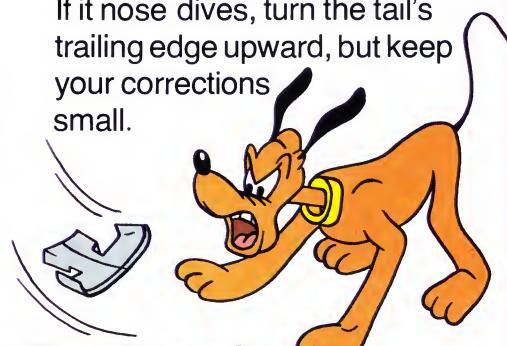

A diagram showing a partially folded paper plane. An arrow points downwards with the text "FOLD DOWN". Another arrow points upwards with the text "FOLD UP".

4. Pinch up a small portion of the rolled edge at the centerline. Scratch the trailing edges of the wings and tail with your thumb nail to camber them.

Launching:

1. Before launching, check the wings, wing tips, tail and rudder for symmetry.
2. Hold model by the body in front of the tail's trailing edge with the wings level. Release the model with a long arm movement. Don't snap your wrist.

Watch "Man in Flight" on "The Wonderful World of Disney" February 24, 26, and 28

Glossary

Aerodynamics—The study of the motion of the air and its effects on bodies moving through it.

Camber—The wing surface curve necessary to produce lift.

Drag—The resistance the air exerts on a body moving through it.

Lift—The force which opposes gravity by pushing up against an aircraft's wings when the craft is in motion.

Symmetry—Achieved when the size and shape of something are exactly the same on both sides of a central line.
